

A close-up photograph of a brick kiln. The kiln is made of dark, textured bricks, some of which are wet and glistening with water. In the foreground, several vibrant red flowers, possibly hibiscus, are in bloom, their petals overlapping and partially obscuring the bricks. Green fern fronds are visible in the background and foreground, adding a natural, lush feel to the scene. The lighting is bright, highlighting the textures of the bricks and the colors of the flowers.

Jeremiah 43:09 Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brickkiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;
